

Banks were reluctant to finance rooftop solar projects, for which the technology was nascent. Non-banking financing companies (NBFCs) offered loans with high interest rates, making rooftop solar an unviable option. Access to finance is still a big bottleneck, especially for micro, small and medium-sized enterprises (MSMEs).

Accessible financing is a prerequisite to drive growth in the rooftop commercial and industrial (C& I) solar market in India. Presently, this segment accounts for almost 75% of the total rooftop solar installations in India with annual additional installations of 1.3 gigawatts (GW) to 1.8GW in the last few years (Figure 1.1).
